GRADUATION GOWNS: A GUIDE

The origin of academic dress can be traced back to the Middle Ages. Then, the gown had a practical purpose; to keep the wearer warm in the cloisters and classrooms of ancient universities. Now they are reserved for ceremonies, worn as a symbol of an individual's academic achievement.

As part of the University's goal to become more environmentally responsible, the gowns we use are made using EnviroThread, a plastic thread manufactured from 100% postconsumer plastic. Each gown saves 30 bottles going to landfill.

Below we detail each of the gowns our Graduands are wearing today and what they mean.

HONORARY DOCTORATE

FRANCES SWAINE

Frances has spent almost her entire legal career at Leigh Day Solicitors. Initially working in Medical Negligence, Frances set up the country's first Human Rights Department in 2001, bringing together colleagues across private and public law to protect the rights of the individual and is an experienced Human Rights Lawyer.

From 2010 to 2021 Frances was Leigh Day's first Managing Partner, initiating the growth of the firm out of London to Manchester. She is responsible for the introduction of the Black Solicitor Apprentice Programme in the firm, a responsibility shared with The University of Law. This commenced in January 2020, with ten solicitor apprentices recruited and the first students due to qualify in 2025.

Currently, she works in the Immigration and Asylum Team, for those applying to the Windrush Status and Compensation Scheme, for asylum seekers and for those who have suffered race discrimination in any area of life.

I feel very honoured to have been chosen as a representative of the legal profession for an Honorary Doctorate when there are so many in the legal field who have also achieved so much. It is very special to me that my legal career, looking back down the telescope of many decades now, can be seen by The University of Law as worthy of such commendation.

Frances Swaine

HONORARY DOCTORATE

EMERITUS PROFESSOR DAVID WILSON

David Wilson is an Emeritus Professor of Criminology at Birmingham City University and the Founding Director of the University's Centre for Applied Criminology. A former Prison Governor, he is an expert in violence, particularly murder and serial murder.

He appears regularly on TV and radio as a Presenter and is the Author of over 20 books. His professional memoir My Life With Murderers was shortlisted for the Saltire Award, and in 2016 he won the Broadcast and Royal Television Society Awards for his Channel 4 documentary, Interview with a Murderer.

He is the Vice President of New Bridge a charity that trains volunteers to write and visit people in prison. As well as the Chair of The Friends of Grendon, which supports the therapeutic work of the only prison in the whole of Europe to work as a therapeutic community.

David is currently filming the new series of Channel 4's In the Footsteps of Killers, which he co-presents with Emilia Fox and he appears on a weekly basis on ITV's This Morning.

“

I am absolutely delighted to have been awarded an Honorary Doctorate by The University of Law.

There is inevitably a close association – and sometimes a tension – between Criminology and Law but I hope that I can use this honour to promote the common interests of these two disciplines.

Emeritus Professor David Wilson

HONORARY DOCTORATE

ADAM WAGNER

Adam Wagner is a Barrister, practising from Doughty Street Chambers in London and a Visiting Professor of Law at Goldsmiths, University of London. He specialises in human rights, public law, international law and public inquiries.

Adam has appeared in some of the leading human rights cases and public inquiries of recent years. During the Covid-19 pandemic, he acted in numerous ground-breaking cases, involving the right to protest, hotel quarantine and the police investigation of lockdown parties in Downing Street. He was the Specialist Advisor to Parliament's Joint Committee on Human Rights. He is currently a Commissioner to the Independent Commission on UK Public Health Emergency Powers and is acting in the Covid-19 Public Inquiry. His acclaimed book, Emergency State, describes the extraordinary story of the Covid-19 lockdown laws. He has a keen interest in freedom of speech and regularly represents protesters in key cases.

Adam is a leading Public Advocate for human rights and the rule of law. He regularly writes and comments in the media and has pioneered a number of human rights public education initiatives, including the UK Human Rights Blog and the award-winning charity, EachOther. Earlier this year, Adam won the Halsbury's Rule of Law award.

“

It is a huge privilege to be given this award. Lawyers play an important role in society and at the heart of the legal community is legal education.

The University of Law has long trained future generations of lawyers and I am honoured to be invited to become part of its community.
